BUTTERFLY EXHIBIT

At a County Cavalcade, held at Seaford, N.Y., last February, with an attendance of 250,000, Boy Scout troops had exhibits built around Insect Life. One troop, under the direction of Frederick H. Miller, showed butterflies and methods of spreading and mounting.

PACIFIC SLOPE MEETING

The 16th meeting of the Pacific Slope Branch of the Lepidopterists' Society, held Sep. 5-7 at the Los Angeles County Museum, brought together some 40 members and the families of some of them. There were discussions on sex pheromones, collecting in various parts of the West, Papilio hybrids, nomenclature and pronunciation of scientific names, etc. Dr. Peter Bellinger reminded members that the Society Library is available to the membership. His address is Department of Natural Sciences, San Fernando Valley State College, Northridge, Cal., 91324. Acknowledgement was made to Lloyd Martin for his contributions over many years. He and his wife were not present, being in Europe. There was a vote of thanks to the Museum, program committee and others who had made this meeting possible.

The Wall Street Journal reported in its May 8 issue that Anthony Owston, who travels the Earth for his company, is always prepared to catch butterflies, whether it be at the Parthenon, on a New Jersey farm, the Quito Airport or even the Whitehouse. And Sports Illustrated for June 16 had a story about U.S. Olympic distance runner Jack Bachelier, of Florida, who collects moths whenever he has the opportunity. (These items courtesy of Dominick J. Pirone. Somebody should get Owston and Bachelier into our Society. --Ed.)
