Mr. March

Send the parcel to Mr. Newton. You can learn it in London to the care of her bookseller rather than the publisher.

Achilles To Facethe Child, you can hardly find the library on the Strand. If you can easily learn when he rides, whether at Gloucester or Bristol, I will prepare it when he will receive.
My dear Mr. March,

This will introduce to you Rev. Mr. March, President of the College in Ohio, which has much character and promise. He is a son of the late President March of the University of Vermont. Also in his time he had a distant personal rank as a scholar. I expect a very powerful influence in New England. He is a very superior young man, of striking excellence in scholarship. I of an remarkable modesty. He has been in nearly 20 years at work at this college. I have suffered personally privations in kindness. I am better in point sickness to which make quite a hero in my estimation. He enjoys raise $50,000 for his business. I have already raised $16,000. Some of his advisers and friends have told him that he ought to apply to you under which he is too sensitive to go in person or by letter. Unless he should learn from some one who knows as well as you, whether it would be the thing for him to do so.

We need not hesitate to tell him just what you think. As he is a most beloved and valued friend.

To Mr. Noah Porter, D.D., LL.D.
President Yale College,

To meet the want of the College Museum, which is exceptionally large and useful at this present time, I hereby offer to expend during the year 1872. the sum of three thousand dollars ($3000) for the care and increase of the collections in Natural Science and Archaeology, and to give my own services during that time to the same objects without compensation, on condition that the College gives an equal amount ($3000) to be expended under my direction for the same purpose.

O.C. Marsh.
Copy of letter from Secretary State, Nov. 4, 1904.

New York June 4, 1873

Rev. A. Harl. Potter, L.L.D.
President of Yale College.

To meet the wants of the Museum before the completion of the new building, hereby offer to expend before July 1st, 1875, the sum of five thousand dollars for the care and increase of the collections in natural history and archaeology, and to pay my own expenses until that time without compensation, provided the college will pay an equal amount ($7,000) to be expended under any direction for the same purpose.

C. C. March.

[Proposition not accepted]
The Corporation of Yale College, in New Haven, Connecticut, have received a donation of five hundred dollars for the purchase of Japanese books for the College Library, and also a donation of one hundred dollars for the purchase of apparatus in the department of Molecular Physics, from Professor O.C. Marsh, of Yale College, for which they return their very sincere thanks.

Noah Webster, President.

By vote of the Corporation, at their Annual Meeting,

26. June 1873

Franklin W. Dexter, Secretary.
New Haven January 21st, 1882

Dear Sir,

Since the death of Professor Benjamin Silliman, which occurred more than sixteen years ago, it has often been suggested that some visible and enduring monument, commemorative of his service to the cause of science, and indicative of the high honor and esteem in which he was held by his numerous pupils and by the public generally, might appropriately be placed on the grounds of Yale College, the principal seat of his labors for more than half a century.

The prospect is now opened for the gratification of this desire to render a merited tribute to a man so universally respected and loved. Professor John J. Veir, Director of the Yale Art School, who has given proof of his talent as a sculptor, has signified his willingness to model, and execute in bronze, a statue of the late Professor Sullivan, at the very moderate cost of seven thousand dollars, including the mounting and encasing. This sum is not much more than one-half the usual expense of a statue of this character. Towards this amount three thousand dollars have already been pledged. If the remainder can be pledged at once, the work will be immediately undertaken.

It has been thought best to lay this proposal before a few persons who would be likely to feel a specially strong interest in the accomplishment of it. This note is addressed to you as one of the number, who, it has been thought, might feel disposed to cooperate in making up the required sum. Permit me respectfully to commend the plan to your consideration.

Mr. Henry G. Kingsley, Treasurer of Yale College, has kindly consented to take charge of all contributors to the proposed statue, and to attend to the business arrangements with Professor King.
Your reply may be addressed to Mr. Kingsley or to either of us while we remain,

Very respectfully and truly yours,

Noah Porter

My dear Professor March.

The Corporation decided unanimously to proceed with the erection of the new building between the Alumni Hall and the Library, contrary to my expectation. Professor Green objected that of places between the Library and the Art School, a corner was left from the principal working room that was unreachable to the School. I then suggested placing it in a Chapel to the east of the art building, although they had been determined upon to add the building in the art school. They proposed to between the library and the art building, arrange for a cheaper plan to accomplish a satisfactory adjustment.

Reported letter incorporation, but the letter body took the position that the case had not been arranged. The design is as to harmonize with the facade of the Peabody building 1 more...

some say civil war is necessary. I see no way for us to avoid it. I must not waste time.

My dear Professor March,

Please accept my thanks and congratulations. In the recent column which you were so kind as to send me.

I like to hear you break out upon the world with such a brilliant surprise. I cannot think the volume so splendid.

I know the intelligence that it brings out of the cold and desolate region where it concerns the waste of unmeasured age of which it tells a fragment of their story. May you live long and earn the world's love and respect.

With best wishes,
