My dear Professor Marsh:

I duly received your letter of December 11th, and fully appreciate all the good things you say of my son. I know he will be glad to serve the Museum and to promote its interests. He is still abroad, where he will remain for several months yet, but any communication from you will be forwarded to him, and, of course, duly acknowledged when he has opportunity.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Professor Marsh:—

I have discovered, through a letter received from President Dwight, that the gentleman of whom I spoke to you as being in a lunatic asylum is not Professor Seymour of Yale University, but Mr. Frank C. Lyman, a graduate of the class of 1876. In the letter in which the matter was brought to my attention he is spoken of as a "Professor", and the writing is such that several of us here read it Seymour, and it still looks much like that name. I hasten to write this because I do not wish to aid in spreading a false report.

Yours very truly,

Prof. O. C. Marsh,
