The Rev. Moncure Conway writes to the Cincinnati Commercial an account of his conversation with Prof. Huxley upon his late visit to the United States; Prof. Huxley stated that his tour was thoroughly enjoyable, the only drawback being the head wind on his return, which delayed the Celtic two days, and prevented his appearing in London to give the first lecture of the autumn season to his classes in the School of Science. As for America, his only regret is that his stay there was but seven weeks instead of seven months. Both he and Mrs. Huxley declare themselves especially delighted by the glimpses they got of American home and social life. As for American science, Prof. Huxley thinks that the same movement and tendency of thought are going on there as in England, though America is some years behind yet. He found the American men of science generally full of kindness. Professor Spencer F. Baird, of the Smithsonian, made the best of guides for his appreciation of the marvellous Exhibition in Philadelphia. He spoke with the utmost enthusiasm of Professor Marsh, of Yale, for his lectures at New York sufficiently attest his opinion concerning Marsh and his achievement. But Prof. Huxley manifested some misgiving whether the Americans really knew what a man they have in Marsh, or recognised that he is one of the best drilled and thoroughly informed men of science now living.

Dear Captain:

I don't know how it happens but I seem to have overlooked the privilege of sending you a check for $19.45. Please find it enclosed. Accept my thanks for your kindness in the premises. I hope this letter will be as much delayed in finding you as my check. That is because I hope you are off where you are cool and happy, and where, possibly, the fiftieth successor of Miss Miller may be aiding you to pass your leisure hours.

Very truly yours,

W. Walter Phelps.

Dear Captain:

I had begun to think too it was a long time since I had seen you. I hope I shall do so before I sail in September; if not, is there any reason why so great a scientist as you who belongs to both continents should not visit me in Berlin? Write Dabney a letter saying that you have hopes of securing an offer for it from Yale men if his price is sufficiently low for the collection. Get his price and let me know what it is.

Hastily and truly yours,

Wm. Walter Phelps.

Dear Captain:

I was going to write to Farwell, who is a friend of Judge Barringer, last week, that I would give $1,000 if he would give another $1,000 to buy the collection for Yale. Unfortunately for the scientific end of the College, before writing Farwell last week I went up to Simsbury. Stewart Dodge was there in the old homestead and I learned from him that they were trying to raise $50,000 for a professorship for Harper. As soon as I heard that I told Dodge I would give him $1,000 for it. So there goes my $1,000. Now the only chance is to get Senator Farwell to do the whole. Wont you write him yourself at Chicago. His address is Hon. Charles B. Farwell, Chicago, Ill. It is worth trying and I think we may succeed.

Faithfully yours,

W. Walter Phelps.
